Nicely branching, sturdy shrub to small tree about 3.5 m high and 2.5 m broad, with vase-shaped, dense crown. Grows easily and naturally forms an attractive, regular crown. The slightly glossy dark green leaf turns yellow in autumn. Blossoms around February/early March, making it one of the latest blossoming cultivars. The light yellow flowers, measuring over 3 cm, have hardly any fragrance. 'Westerstede' may not be the most beautiful Hamamelis for its flowers, but it is certainly a very healthy, cultivar with good growth. The late blossoming is also a good attribute.
